Dear John:

I appreciated hearing from you. Thanks for your kind thoughts.

I, too, will miss Harry. He mentioned his connection with your organization and encouraged me to keep in touch with you. Following his advice as well as my own inclination, I have enclosed a short bio and picture. Look forward to seeing you.

Sincerely,

Richard J. Kerr

Richard J. Kerr
Deputy Director for Administration

As Deputy Director for Administration, Mr. Kerr is responsible for administratively supporting those Intelligence Community components under the jurisdiction of the DCI as well as the many other related functions one would normally expect in any large Federal agency. He handles communications, finance, information services, computer technology, logistics, medical services, personnel, security and training. He assumed this position in January 1986.

In July 1982, he was selected to serve as Associate Deputy Director for Intelligence. As such, he assisted in directing the Central Intelligence Agency's component responsible for all analysis and production of finished intelligence.

From 1976 to 1982, Mr. Kerr served as director or deputy of offices responsible for regional and political analysis worldwide, for intelligence analysis of East Asia, and production of current intelligence.

Mr. Kerr entered on duty with the Central Intelligence Agency as a military analyst in 1960 in the office responsible for preparing biographic and reference material. His various staff assignments have dealt with imagery collection and he also served as the executive officer for the Intelligence Community Staff. Mr. Kerr was selected to be the Directorate of Intelligence's representative in Honolulu where he was responsible for all liaison activities related to the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mr. Kerr received his BA in History and did graduate work at the University of Oregon. He is married to the former Janice Sinclair and they have four children.
